

FELIX LINDVIK

AUDIO-VISUAL PROBLEM-SOLVER

In the days of multimodalism and cross-field integrations, multitalents have an important role. I believe that by knowing my way around many corners of my trade, being a "jack of all trades" opens doors to new opportunities and solutions.

My name is Felix, born and raised in the Finnish countryside. As the "country-boy" I am, I never hesitate to roll my sleeves up and saying, "we'll solve this", no matter the problem at hand.

My philosophy is seeking solutions where other people see problems, and using my cross-field skills as my main problem-solving tool.

During my university studies I was introduced to a broad field of view over the media-field. With a specialization in online presence and digital design, I know how to navigate and design for a broad spectrum of digital purposes.

During my senior year, I was given the opportunity to tutor freshmen in their introductory web design course.

In my thesis, I analyzed and showed how simple means can help companies to catch and keep the attention of Gen Z in means of simple but effective web design choices and methodology.

EXPERIENCE

Communications manager in charge of content creation

Swedish-speaking School youth Association in Finland (FSS)

In this position at the Non-profit organization FSS, I was in charge of the organization's communication and marketing. In practice, this involved designing and maintaining a reputable brand both visually and communicatively, maintaining web content and the site as a whole as well as designing various promotional material for both digital and printed purposes.

In addition to this I was also the administrative manager of the organization's magazine, meaning responsibility for e.g. ad-sales, customer contact, and general administration of the editorial process.
